HUD Secretary Visits Northwest Arkansas to Discuss Affordable Housing

In a press release on Wednesday, the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) announced that HUD Secretary Scott Turner recently visited Northwest Arkansas, where he met with Governor Sarah Sanders and Congressman Steve Womack to discuss affordable housing solutions and economic growth in the region.

During the visit, the leaders toured opportunity zones and spoke with elected officials, education leaders, and members of the business community about local initiatives that are making a meaningful impact in the area. Governor Sanders highlighted the region’s innovative approaches to affordable housing, while Secretary Turner praised the state’s efforts to forge public-private partnerships and implement localized solutions to address housing affordability challenges.

The visit underscored the importance of collaboration between federal, state, and local leaders in addressing housing needs and supporting vibrant, thriving communities.
