HUD Awards $1.5 Million for Housing Mobility-Related Services Planning

In a press release today, the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) announced that it has awarded $1.5 million in Housing Mobility-Related Services Planning awards to 25 PHAs across 14 states. Based on the Community Choice Demonstration (CCD), formerly the Housing Choice Voucher (HCV) Mobility demonstration, the grants allow PHAs to implement programs in their communities that help families using housing choice vouchers find housing in better-resourced opportunity neighborhoods.

The CCD builds upon recent research showing that growing up in neighborhoods with lower poverty levels improves children's academic achievement, long-term success, and reduces intergenerational poverty. In addition, studies demonstrate that children who move to low-poverty neighborhoods experience lower rates of hospitalizations, reduced hospital spending, and improvements in mental health. Adults who move to low-poverty neighborhoods see reductions in obesity and diabetes as well.

A list of awardees can be found in the press release.
