HUD Awards $3.7 Million to Help Low-Income Seniors Age in Place

In a press release yesterday, the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) announced that it has awarded more than $3.7 million to two nonprofit organizations and a local housing authority through HUD’s Older Adults Home Modification Program (OAHMP). The funds will be used for low-cost, low barrier, high impact home modifications that will reduce older adults’ risk of falling, improve safety and accessibility, and enhance their functional abilities in their homes.

These investments will enable older adults to remain in their homes rather than move to nursing homes or other assisted care facilities. The grantees will deliver home modification services to more than 525 senior families. You can find a breakdown of the funding at the bottom of the press release.
